Oakey State High School entered the Angora Goat Competition on Wednesday, August 14 at the Arrow Energy Pavilion.

The 11 goats entered performed well, with one being judged Grand Champion of the overall competition this year.

Oakey State High School has been raising angoras along with cattle, chickens and alpacas.

The students attending care for and present the goats at shows that they attend.

“What I look for when I’m judging an angora is a large-framed animal, a nice even coat over it and a nice stance, lots of character and style,” a student from the school said.

Ekka visitors can view these goats from 9am until 5pm daily.
